9-week course

Week 3

Day 3

Places have many things

There is snow on the mountain.

This mountain has snow.

Places have many things

Places have many things

- There are great bars and discos in the Zona Rosa.
- There are antique shops in the Zona Rosa.
- There is an excellent small variety show theatre!

- The Zona Rosa has an excellent small variety show theatre!
- The Zona Rosa has antique shops.
- The Zona Rosa has great bars and discos.

Questions with “There is/are...”

Thank goodness, because we’re using
“to be”, this is easy:

There is There are

Is there ... ? Are there ... ?

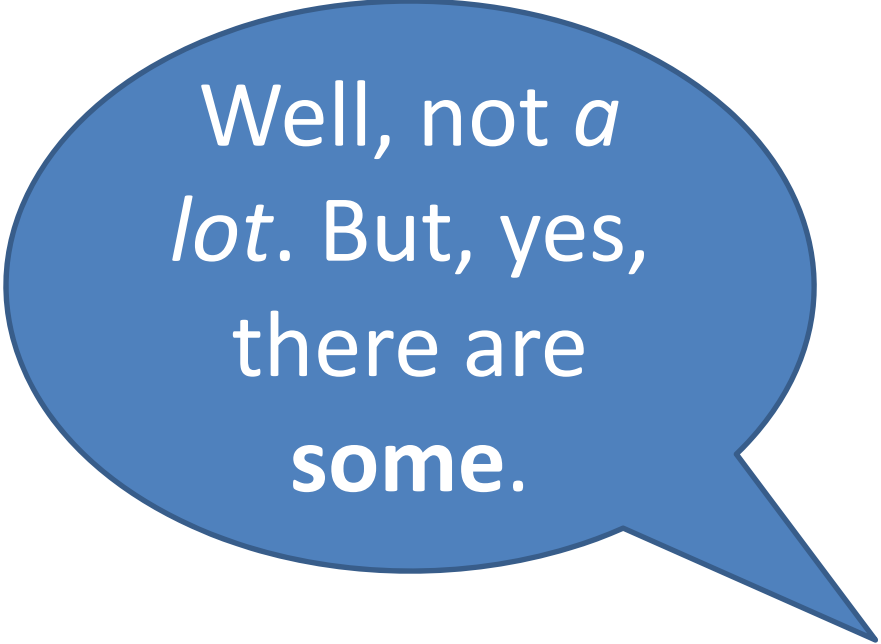

The diagram illustrates the transformation of affirmative statements into questions. For the first pair, a blue arrow points from 'is' to 'Is' and a red arrow points from 'There' to 'there'. For the second pair, a blue arrow points from 'are' to 'Are' and a red arrow points from 'There' to 'there'. In all cases, the ellipsis and period remain in their original positions.

A note on “some”

“Some” is often used to indicate less than “many”. “Some” \cong “a few”.

Are there a lot of Japanese restaurants in Kenting?

Well, not a lot. But, yes, there are some.
