Mr. Lee,

Whew! We've made it thru two passes.

My only last recommendation is that you and your colleagues have one more intensive pass at it, trying really hard to anticipate how the reviewers at the journals are going to receive it. From my experience (reading responses to other people's papers; admittedly, not mine!), I would recommend that you simply put your assumptions aside and try to read it like disinterested third parties, who also happen to have marketing expertise. Not an easy thing to do, but it pays to do it before you hand it over to genuinely disinterested parties! You have to ask yourself, "If I weren't Ken Lee, would I be able to obtain solid usable advice, grounded in believable evidence, from this paper?"

Best wishes! AND, of course, I remain at your service, if you still need me.

Oh! AND you can pay me! Any time you want! The tally comes to NT$10,213. We can round it down to an even "ten grand," if you so desire.

It's been nice working with you. Admit it's true: Working together in the same room, interactively, holds special charms, does it not?

Take care. -raz
